The Gettysburg Memorials.

Following are the remarks of Representative Barker, in the House of Representatives, upon the resolve making appropriations for monuments, purchasing land and improving the same, on the battlefield of Gettysburg

The deep interest that I feel in the passage of this resolve is the only excuse that I can offer for trespassing upon the time of this House in the discussion of a matter pertaining to events happening almost before my recollection. I am well aware that I am open to the criticism of being young, and that in matters of this kind older men should lead the way, but the annals of history show that to the second, and even later generations, has been left the duty, and the pleasure of erecting monuments, or in some other way perpetuating the memory of the brave and heroic deeds of their ancestors. This duty is one which, for the sake of future generations, ought to be performed, in order to keep fresh in the minds of those who are to come after us, the history of the grand struggles and sacrifices made by the men of our day in order to preserve to their posterity a united and prosperous country. In advocating as I do the passage of this resolve, I do it not as a Republican, not as a son of the North desiring to erect a monument to the honor of the victorious North over a crushed and broken South, but I do it as a citizen of the United States of America, desiring that the spot which more than all others marks the saving and re-uniting of a great country shall never be forgotten or lost sight of. I do it realizing that on that spot this Union was cemented by the best blood of her citizens from North, South, East and West, and believing that the monument that honors the boys in blue will, in the years that are to come, be a pride to the descendants of the boys in gray, and will be pointed at by them simply as a monument to all who fell there, and not as one erected to sectional pride. We are to-day one people, and the ground that we wish to make sacred by this action holds the remains of the bravest of both sides in its embrace, thus giving to all sections an equal interest in beautifying their last resting place.

We are bound to the passage of this resolve by a promise far more binding than any written promise could ever be, by a promise made at a time of peril by a distressed people to those who were suffering in the field that this Union might be preserved. Although but a lad, Mr. Speaker, yet I can remember how my boyish blood was stirred by the sight of the brave men who were shouldering their muskets and starting for the front. I can remember that in the little town where I lived men were promised that if they would enlist, their families should be cared for till their return that if they never returned, or if they returned maimed or wounded, they and their families should be the wards of a grateful people, and that whatever befell them, their names should be honored throughout the length and breadth of the land. We promised them that their patriotism should be so engraved in the history of this nation that no time should efface it. I can remember when early in the great contest the army of the Potomac were lying dormant in and about Washington, how impatient we were that something should be done, and the promises that were then made be fulfilled. I can remember the dark day when the southern army first stood upon northern soil; and well can I remember the days that followed, when hushed voices and saddened faces were the order of the day; when mothers were praying and gray-headed fathers were urging the young men to go to the front and save this country; when soul-stirring appeals were made to our soldiers in the field to check the advance of the rebel army at any cost of life and property. I can remember that at these times promises were made which it should now be our pleasure as well as our duty to fulfill. Most of these promises I am proud to say have been faithfully carried out. The action asked for here to-day is a direct line with those already performed, and I believe that this Legislature will rise proudly to the occasion and discharge this obligation, as she has all others, with a spirit so loyal and patriotic that its tone cannot be mistaken.

I do not, however, urge the passage of this resolve solely on the ground as an express contract, but I urge it as a duty that we owe both to the living and the dead who were dentified with the memorable struggle that took place at Gettysburg. On the morning of the first day of that battle the entire northern army were on the defensive, and the people were looking on with a fear and dread that has never been equalled in the history of any war. The dire results that would follow the march of Lee's army over those Pennsylvanian hills had been fully calculated, and it was well understood that the fate of the North was then to be settled. Not only did the people so understand it, but it was doubly impressed on the brave boys on whom rested the responsibility of receiving the shock of an advancing army numbering three times their own in size, and which was compact and prepared for battle, while theirs was scattered over a radius of fifty miles. Well did they know that on that day the motto of "Victory or Death" meant more than mere sounding words. To them it was a stern reality from which there was no escape; it was, indeed, victory or death, not only to the individual soldiery, but for the rights and principles for which they were contending, and which were dearer to them than life itself. That the battle of Gettysburg was the turning point in the war of the rebellion was as well understood when the fight opened as when it closed, and each man felt that he had more than an ordinary part to play in the struggle that was before him. But for that feeling the Union army must have been overcome, for that battle was won by stern, hard fighting rather than by any great amount of strategy. The soldier who carried his musket and did his best, was quite as important a factor as the general who sat on his horse and directed the movement of the troops. A great general once said that "That army wins the fight whose common soldiery have ten minutes the more fight in them," and never in the history of war was that saying more fully verified than in the Battle of Gettysburg. It was the pluck and the nerve, the bone and the sinew of the private soldier, aided of course by gallant officers, that saved this Union in that terrible battle.

New England played a very important part in this contest, and her troops won for themselves a name which must live until the memory of that fight has ceased to exist. Maine bore well her part. She was represented by ten regiments of infantry, one of cavalry, and three batteries of artillery. While I can not dwell in detail the work done by the men of Maine, I cannot refrain from calling your attention to some of their gallant conduct. When, on the morning of the second day, Lee, with his strongest force, charged the centre of the Union army in the valley of the battlefield, it is said that the famous batteries of Stevens and the gallant Hall, who were holding Culp's and Cemetery Hills, trained their guns so as to meet the advancing horde; if they should be successful in breaking through the line of Union infantry; that a stern determination was written in their faces to yield these commanding positions only with their lives, and I have been told by an eye witness that at one time the rebel troops could be seen between the men of this command and their guns, and that nothing but this mad determination to conquer or die, seconded by the indomitable courage of the men of the "Pine Tree State," allowed them to recover their position and bring these same guns to bear upon a retreating enemy. The failure of that charge settled the fight in that quarter of the field, but the victory was by no means won. In the valley could be seen mother and daughter fighting side by side—the 19th Massachusetts and the 19th Maine, standing shoulder to shoulder in the thick of the fight, doing yeoman service in the cause of a common country. Who is there within the sound of my voice that can fail to remember the old 4th Maine, and the fatal Plum Run. Obeying orders, they marched into the valley of the shadow of death without a murmur, knowing that they were marching to almost certain destruction, they accomplished the object for which they were sent, returning with scarcely enough men to make it worth while to call the roll. And shall such men as these be forgotten? Shall we refuse to appropriate money to perpetuate their memory? Shall the dead Col. Walker who was killed at the head of this regiment, Maj. Whitcomb who was wounded, and Capt. Libby who took command, appeal to us in vain?

Maine was represented in that fight by many brave men, among whom could be seen Col. Lakeman, and Capt. Morgan who succeeded him; Col. Edwards of the 5th; Col. Burnham of the 6th; our gallant and beloved Connor, whom we have so delighted to honor in recognition of his services; Col. Merrill of the 17th; our familiar friend, Col. Tilden, the present Secretary of the Senate, who was made prisoner, and with whose sufferings as such we are all familiar; Col. Welch; Col. Heath; Col. Cummings; Col. Smith; the veteran Howard, who now carries his "empty sleeve." And I could trespass upon your time still further by naming others—

> "Who with the loyal many
> Were dealing out in that red fight,
> With sword and grape and shot and shell,
> That awful lurid dose of hell
> To those by man and God accursed,
> Turning the tide of treason first,
> Way down in Pennsylvania."

But I will not attempt to fulfill such a task, and will only call your attention to the turning point in the battle of Gettysburg, as well as, in my opinion, the turning point in the war of the rebellion. Two points of land were necessary to command the valley of the battlefield, the high lands known as Culp's Hill and Cemetery Hill; and on the other side, the famous "Little Round Top." The position at Culp's and Cemetery Hills was already held by the Maine batteries, and they had demonstrated their ability to continue to hold that position. The question of which army should gain Round Top was the decisive question to be settled. Again the heroes of Maine were called upon to show their valor. The gallant 20th, headed by our well-beloved Chamberlain, climbed and pushed their way up the rugged side of that hill and gained the summit, only to see an opposing force of much greater number advancing from another quarter to the same point.

Then it was that the famous charge was made. Then it was that Chamberlain was made almost immortal. With bayonets fixed, and as has been said, "with two hundred pounds of Maine muscle behind each bayonet," that noble regiment charged down the mountain, sweeping everything before them. This settled the fate of the two opposing armies. This won "Round Top," and in winning Round Top both commanding positions were in the hands of the Union forces, and by a strange coincidence both were held by the men of Maine. In the valley our troops fought gallantly side by side with other States, but the ridges were the important points, so that, with all due regard for the brave soldiers of other States, I feel justified in saying that the soldiers of the Pine Tree State won Gettysburg, that in doing so they practically settled the war of the rebellion, and that special honor is due to them on this account.

After scenes like these in which our bravest and best shed their blood like water, is it just or right that Maine should fail to be represented on this field by suitable tablets?

Other States have subscribed liberally to their appropriation, both in the purchase of land and the erection of monuments. Monuments have been erected at a cost of from one to ten thousand dollars, and I should feel ashamed of my native State, after the gallant conduct of her soldiers, if she failed to do her whole duty in regard to this matter.

The appeal for this appropriation comes unanimously from the old soldiers. But few are living and these fast fading away.

In view of the past promises we have made and the duty we owe let us give them the satisfaction of seeing this work performed during their lives, and with such hearty unanimity as shall forever after be their pride and gratification.

Gentlemen, I trust this resolve will pass unanimously.

STATE NEWS.

Cumberland.

Sheriff Webb, Friday, upon receipt of information from Fryeburg, arrested in Portland Herbert Adams, a young man who had stolen a gold watch worth $150 from a resident of Fryeburg. The watch was given up by Adams, and upon his paying the costs of the case he was allowed to go free.

Mr. William L. Bradford, of Cape Elizabeth, has invented a mast head ventilator that consists of an attachment by which there is an air space left between the trestle-tree and the mast-head whereby a free circulation of air is secured, as also a chance for the water to drain off, thereby protecting the mast-head from rot. The ventilator has been in use for seven years, and masts on which it has been for that time are as sound as ever.

The Allan steamer Circassian, Capt. Richardson, arrived in Portland Friday morning fourteen days from Liverpool via Halifax, bringing 72 passengers and 2,392 tons of freight. The Dominion steamer Ontario, Capt. Couch, also arrived Friday, from Bristol, England, with 1,400 tons of freight, including 22,000 tin plates. Both steamers report very boisterous weather the whole passage, constant head winds and heavy gales. The Ontario shipped heavy seas and received some slight damage on deck.

A contract has been signed between the town of Gorham, represented by Lewis McLellan, chairman of the selectmen, and D. W. Clark, President of the Portland Water Company. The company are to pay the town annually in lieu of taxation, and are also to furnish three watering places already established. The question of the amount to be paid for this water is to be left to three referees if the parties do not agree. The contract will be submitted to the voters of the town for ratification.

It will be remembered that the schooner George W. Cushing was seized for buying provisions, etc., at a port in Nova Scotia, not remote from the home port of the bark Northern Empire. One day recently as the schooner was bound from Portland to the fishing grounds, off shore, the captain espied the English bark Northern Empire, of Windsor, N. S., short of provisions, and with that magnanimous spirit, which characterizes American fishermen, supplied the necessary stores, and Mr. Charles Littlejohn, of the Cushing, was placed on board the bark and brought her safely into port.

The Portland Argus reports the disappearance from that city of Frank J. Fogg, about thirty years old, and a young woman named either Harris or Anderson, she having gone by both names. Fogg leaves a wife and three children, the youngest but six weeks old, in destitute circumstances. Mrs. Fogg is an estimable lady, twenty-four years old, a member of a most respectable Boston family, while Miss Harris or Anderson is described as not very propossessing. Fogg is a carriage painter, but some time ago he opened a barber's shop for the purpose, it is now said, of having a convenient place to meet the young woman who has been a frequent visitor there, and is now supposed to have run away with him.

Complaint has been made that some three or four Winnegance men are catching bass with nets having meshes of unlawful size. It is stated that they fish systematically and continually, and by their shrewdness have thus far escaped detection. Occasionally the fish warden finds one of their nets and seizes it, but it is commonly understood that these men continue to catch undersized bass and make it profitable business in spite of the occasional loss of a net.

Agricultural.

Alsike clover is now so common that its seed costs little more per bushel than the common clover. It is not more than half the size of the latter, and four or five quarts are as good a seeding as a peck of the common red variety. But if one of the main objects is improvement of the soil, the mammoth variety of red clover, sometimes called pea vine, should be sown. It has heavy, coarse stalks, and roots correspondingly large and deep.

English farmers are learning what was long ago discovered by American dairymen, that the co-operative plan of making butter or cheese turns out a more uniformly good product and at less cost than to have either made by private farmers at their homes. The conveniences for taking the best care of milk and cream, all exist in the large dairy, and it can afford to pay well for the skill required to conduct it. Factories for making cheese or butter are rapidly increasing in numbers, and it is only thus that English farmers can attempt to compete with American and Canadian dairy products.

The wheat situation in this country is much stronger than it was a year ago. Of the total available supply last July, including the new crop and the remains of the previous one, we have exported up to Feb. 1, ninety millions of bushels, against 45,000,000 in the same months of the previous year. Our available supply now is 179,000,000 bushels, as against 198,000,000 bushels last year at this time. Of our present supply we shall require 120,000,000 bushels for home consumption until next harvest, leaving barely 60,000,000 to export. Last year, during the five months from Feb. 1 to July 1, we exported in wheat and flour 52,000,000 bushels, and the foreign demand is likely to be at least as great now as it was then.

The time has passed when cheap meat production will be mainly due, as it has been, to cheap lands and food that costs little or nothing. It is likely that in a long series of years all kinds of meat will be dearer than they have been. If feeders gain, it will be due less to natural advantages for which they are not responsible, than to their own skill and good management. There is yet an immense deal to learn, as is shown at all the fat-stock exhibitions. The animals that take the prizes as live stock, do not have the largest proportion of good meat when dressed. In every case there is too much waste in the extra fat that has to be cut off and thrown away or converted to some secondary use. One fact is pretty plain in any estimate of the cost of making beef. The gain from animals while growing is put on at least expense per pound, and contains the largest proportion of salable meat. In a close summary of the results of several live-stock shows, it was found that the gain of an average one-year-old animal cost 4.04 cents per pound. From birth up to two years old, the gain cost 5.05 cents, while if feeding is continued up to three years old, the entire gain from birth costs 7.40 cents per pound. It is certain that in the great majority of cases feeding is continued long after it has ceased to pay. For all stock not intended for breeding, the best feed should be given from birth up, and the animal never be allowed to get too poor to butcher. But while very young, the best food is that which promotes growth of frame rather than laying on of fat. A young animal thus fed will always have a due proportion of lean meat, sweet and juicy.

The unwritten music of spring will soon be heard, proceeding from every living thing in the air and among the reeds of the brook. Just listen! There is an old bull frog, on the margin of the stream, with one leg in the water, by way of a cooler. How he thrums away on his bass-viol: "Thung, thong, thong, thang, thing, poutchung!" The little frogess opposite plays the treble to a charm, without scarce opening her mouth: "Te-neet, te-nept, hire, irr, irr, to-neet." And down she darts into the water, her great-toe awfully mangled with a stone from some cruel boy; but, boys, this is wrong. Then there is the old leader, that green-eyed monster! dressed in yellow breeches, and white sash around him. Hear him as he stands up so majestically against that reed: "Paddy got drunk, paddy got drunk, oonk, unk." And down he goes to wet his whistle. Then flutters a chattering chorister overhead, calling upon his tribe to go and watch their sick mates: "Bobolink, bobolink, stingy, stingy; so sweet, sweet, she'll die soon, oh, dear!" "Pshaw, pshaw, chunk!" thrills the brown thrasher. "Mew, mew, mew," squeaks the catbird. "Who whip-poor-will" cries one. "Katy-did, Katy-did," thrills another. "I'll come and see, I will, will, will," sings the yellow bird. And so sing they all in their unwritten music, without, perhaps, a discordant note. Soon our old friend, Robert Lincoln, better known as Bob Lincoln, or Bob Link, will return to us. As I write I can imagine that I see one of these native musicians on the top-most bough of an apple tree, shaking his variegated sides with laughter, and amusing himself in tuning his pipes, as it were, to catch the right pitch; at times striking "B and E flat," and again a semi-tone approaching "C sharp," wearing, as usual, the summer costume of his father and grandfather, and I do not know but that of his great-grandfather, too, black satin vest and pantaloons, and white roundabout jacket. Soon his old favorite, Mary Lincoln, in a dark russet morning dress, starts up from a bush or tuft of high grass on a shopping excursion, when "Robert," alive to the duties of gallantry, instantly offers his services, "wingfully" and "songfully," and the air at once is filled with his delicious melody, "in linked sweetness long drawn out." Yet there are people who never listen to the singing of birds, but who will pay large sums of money to hear Italian or German opera singers howl like a boy who has eaten too many green apples.—B. Perley Poore.

The next meeting of Piscataquis Pomona will be held with Piscataquis Grange, South Sebec, Thursday, March 17, with afternoon programme. Address of welcome by Addie Donald, response by Florence Tufts; select readings by members to be appointed by Piscataquis, Pleasant River and East Dover Granges. Question 1st: Resolved, "That the success of the farmer depends more upon the wife than the husband." Question to be opened by Mrs. Jason Hassell, affirmative, Henry Morrison, negative; second question, "Is the grange beneficial to the farmer, if so, in what respect?" Question to be opened by Jason Hassell.

Penobscot County Grange met with Golden Rule Grange, North Newburgh, Feb. 26th. Owing to the bad condition of the roads but small delegations were present, not enough for a forenoon session. After dinner, quite a number of go-ahead Patrons entered the hall and in the absence of the Worthy Master and Overseer, the Secretary (the only officer present) called the meeting to order, and by invitation, Bro. Wm. Patten, Master of Golden Rule Grange, opened the grange in the fourth degree. The Patrons were welcomed in a very cordial manner by Sister Beckey Whiting, responded to by Bro. I. C. York, of Eastern Star, in a few well chosen words. After the usual routine of business, the time was profitably spent in interesting remarks and music, also a recitation by Sister Mary Whitney. The question—Woman Suffrage—was proposed and ably discussed; Bro. I. C. York affirmative, Bro. Daniel Patten negative. Four granges were represented, and interesting remarks were made.

Your Children

Are constantly exposed to danger from Colds, Whooping Cough, Croup, and diseases peculiar to the throat and lungs. For such ailments, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, promptly administered, affords speedy relief and cure.

As a remedy for Whooping Cough, with which many of our children were afflicted, we used, during the past winter, with much satisfaction, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. For this affection, we consider this preparation the most efficacious of all the medicines which have come to our knowledge.—Mary Parkhurst, Preceptress, Home for Little Wanderers, Doncaster, Md.

My children have been peculiarly subject to attacks of Croup, and I failed to find any effective remedy until I commenced administering Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. This preparation relieves the difficulty of breathing and invariably cures the complaint.—David G. Starks, Chatham, Columbia Co., N. Y.

I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for many years, and have found it especially valuable in Whooping Cough. This medicine allays all irritation, prevents inflammation from extending to the lungs, and quickly subdues any tendency to Lung Complaint. —J. B. Wellington, Plainville, Mich.

I find no medicine so effective, for Croup and Whooping Cough, as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It saved the life of my little boy, only six months old, carrying him safely through the worst case of Whooping Cough I ever saw.—Jane Malone, Piney Flats, Tenn.

REPUBLICAN CAUCUSES.

The Republican voters of the City of Bangor, are hereby invited to meet at

CITY HALL,

Tuesday Evening, March 8, 1887,

At 7 30 o clock

To nominate a Candidate for Mayor

WARD CAUCUSES.

They are also invited to meet at the polling places in the various wards on FRIDAY EVENING, March 11th at 7 30 o clock to nominate candidates for Aldermen Councilmen and Ward Officers to be voted for at the Municipal Election, March 14th 1887

By order of the Republican City Committee

M G TRASK Chairman

Bangor March 3 1887

Now Let Bangor Respond.

The returns from the spring elections as published in another column of the WHIG this morning are certainly full of encouragement for the Republicans Portland has repeated her splendid victory of last year Auburn makes a clean sweep, Rockland breaks the record with a grand increase of the Republican majority for Mayor and a complete turn over in the city council, Ellsworth comes very close to tipping out the Democratic Mayor cutting his majority down to a fine margin and makes a big gain in the city council and so on through the list Lewiston finds the Democrats the one grain of comfort in the sweeping defeat they have encountered McGillicuddy having pulled through with a scant majority of thirty but both branches of the city council are Republican Now let Bangor prepare to send back the word next Monday night that the Queen City still stands in the Republican column by a large majority Commence the work to-night by attending the caucus with full ranks Let the representative Republicans show by their presence that they are keenly alive to the importance of the coming contest and mean to elect their candidate by a good old time majority A good caucus gives a strong impetus to the campaign Remember this fact and see to it that City Hall is well filled to night

A Grand Meeting

If any one was inclined to doubt the unanimity of sentiment in Bangor in opposition to the amendment to the charter of the International Railway, last night's meeting will set them right A gentleman well qualified to express an opinion on the subject remarked to us last evening that he never attended a meeting on a purely business matter where the interest was so great or the sentiment so unanimous as was manifested at this gathering called to enter our most earnest protest against this act of injustice There was not a dissenting voice although an invitation was extended to any one opposed to the resolutions to give expression to their views This meeting should permanently settle the question of the sentiment of Bangor From this time forth it is proposed to vigorously present our claims for consideration to the members of the Legislature and in a matter so clear and equitable there ought not be any question as to the result Bangor is certainly entitled to the protection asked for

A False Campaign Cry

The New York World after casting its eye over the record of the first half of the term of the Democratic Administration finds it anything but satisfactory and concludes that the Democrats have been weakened rather than strengthened It holds the policy of the President largely responsible for this state of affairs but when it proceeds to arraign him for a failure to expose Republican corruption in the departments it shows its unwillingness to comprehend the fact that this Democratic roorback has been forever squelched Whatever fault the World may find with Mr Cleveland it will hardly charge him with being a fool and nothing short of that would have prevented the exposure called for by the World had there been anything to expose For the past two years Mr Cleveland has had his smelling committees nosing about in the various departments, but although all the books have been at his beck and call it has been found impossible to startle the country with even the slightest corroboration of the Democratic campaign cry of official corruption It is, we admit, very humiliating, especially when compared with the condition of affairs which surrendered to the Republicans after many years of uninterrupted Democratic rule but facts are stubborn things and the World may as well submit to the inevitable

A Democratic Opinion

Major William Dickey the veteran legislator and Democrat of Fort Kent, took occasion to remark at the farmers meeting in Boston, Saturday, that Governor Bodwell was as good a Governor as Maine ever had, and that Mr Blaine, though a political opponent, was one of the most honorable men he ever met

The New Hampshire Contest

The opinion of Hon W. I Foster and Hon W E Chandler having been asked by Hon Martin A Haynes concerning his rights and the appropriate action to be taken by him in connection with the election on Nov 2, 1886, of a Representative in Congress for the First District of New Hampshire, at which election he was the Republican candidate and Luther F McKinney was the Democratic candidate, a long opinion has been given, of which the recapitulation is as follows

(1) As the law now stands, if, upon the face of the returns of the vote for Representative in Congress as they appear when the Governor and Council shall declare the result of the election, Mr McKinney has a plurality over Mr Haynes, the prima facie certificate of election must be given to the former, whatever may have been the actual result of the election as it would appear upon an inspection of the preserved ballots or otherwise.

(2) It is discretionary with the Governor and Council when to declare the result of the election They may declare it fourteen days before the first Wednesday in June, at the time when they determine who appear to be elected State Senators; or they may wait until a reasonable period before the first Monday in December, when Congress assembles.

(3) Mr. Haynes, as a candidate at the election, has a right to have an inspection made, under due limitations and safeguards, of the ballots cast for Representative in Congress and forwarded to and preserved in the office of the Secretary of State.

(4) This right to have an inspection of the preserved ballots may be enforced by mandamus in case the Secretary of State declines to allow it.

(5) Without waiting for an inspection of the ballots, Mr. Haynes may proceed to contest the election of Mr. McKinney, and after giving notice of contest may, under the law of Congress, take the testimony of the Secretary of State, and require him to produce before the Judge taking such testimony, either within or without the office of the Secretary, all the preserved ballots, and to count them, and make copies of them, or a tabulation thereof, a part of his testimony.

As Viewed From a Democratic Standpoint

[New York Sun]

The second year of Mr Cleveland's administration ends to-day The character and tendency of that administration may now be regarded as formed and fixed The line and groove of its policy are firmly marked, and in the ordinary course of things there is small reason to expect a deviation from them in a few months more the question of the next candidate and the next administration will have become the first in the public mind Whether Mr Cleveland is to be renominated or not, he must stand or fall by the record he has already made He can add to the record, but he cannot change it and nothing indicates that he wishes to change it He is apparently well satisfied with what has been done

Mr Cleveland's own characteristics were pretty well known before he was elected to the Presidency, and they have for the most part been strengthened, but not altered, at Washington He has continued to be strenuously, and even unnecessarily industrious, trying to mop up an ocean of detail with a single broom His conscientiousness is another side of his industry, but it has developed elasticity under the strain of certain bills supposed to be heavy with votes He desires to promote the welfare of the country, but the delusion has steadily grown upon him that this is not compatible with his giving particular attention to the welfare of his party Elected Governor with the help of half breed votes, elected President by the help of stalwart and Mugwump votes, he seems to fancy that his political position is exceptional, and that he is called upon to be an arbitrator rather than a partisan This is a view in which, of course, none of the leaders of his party can encourage him Partly from this fact, partly because his newness to public life has precluded long or intimate acquaintance with the strong men in the Democracy, partly, perhaps, from a belief in himself—not unnatural in view of the extraordinary good fortune which lifted him from the sheriff's office of Erie county to the White House—and partly from his confidence in his own judgment his policy is his personal volition, unaided, for the most part and unrestrained by advice from those whose advice would be most valuable His aim has been to impose his wishes upon the Democracy, not to consult and carry out theirs He sincerely believes that he knows what Democrats need better than they know themselves They ask for bread, and he gives them a stone

He was not quite lucky in selecting his Cabinet It is unnecessary now to speak of the political geography of it, but it was unfortunate that only two practical politicians should have been included in it Mr Whitney and Mr Manning have been its strength, and, with the retirement of Mr Manning the navy remains the one department of the government which is administered by a politician of skill, and administered with satisfactory efficiency Mr Bayard, if left to himself, would, doubtless have made a good record in the State Department, but it the very beginning Mr Cleveland appointed to the first place in the diplomatic service a man whom ninety-nine out of every hundred Democrats had never heard of and whose political distinction is found in the number of Democratic enemies he has made Other unsuitable appointments have followed, until Mr Bayard must feel that he is heavily punished for the sins of others The Postmaster General is a man of much ambition and little experience The Attorney General is a gentleman who believes that public office is a speculative trust While he is allowed to keep his post, scandal and grave suspicion and the shadow of dishonor must hover about the administration, and Mr Cleveland is responsible The Secretary of War is more popular with the Mugwumps than with the Democrats of Massachusetts He represents nobody but his ancestors and them he represents with a reserved and dignified deportment, but demeanor is not statesmanship Besides there must be Democratic politics somewhere in a Democratic administration, and if Mr Cleveland has no inclination for politics, he should have seen the need of surrounding himself with men who had But after all we suspect that the members of the Cabinet are not so much to be blamed The real cause of the trouble is not with the Cabinet

* * * * * * * *

The uncertainty and disposition to bicker shown too often by the Democrats in the 49th Congress has resulted largely from the want of cordial relations between them and the President It was his duty to lead them, to hold them together, to propose mutual concessions, and to find a clear and acceptable policy He did not do it He made a vigorous effort to force upon them his silver views, known to be unacceptable to a majority of the party, that is about all He has gone his way and they have gone theirs His way has sometimes been the better, and we give him high and hearty praise for some of his vetoes, but his duty was to guide as well as to block His administration has been free from scandal save in one dark instance As long, however as the purpose for which he was elected remains unfulfilled as long as he prefers in even a single instance Republicans and Mugwumps to his natural friends, as long as he wanders in pride of opinion out of the straight and narrow Democratic way, so long must he be isolated from his party, and so long must the performance of his administration and the strength of his party be less than they ought to be We say nothing of his personal hopes If he was unmoved by the story of the fall elections, it is not to be thought that he cares for the deep dissatisfaction which his policy still excites The fact remains that the rudder of the Democratic party has not been kept true

[From the N Y World, Dem]

Taking the elections of last year as a test, the Democrats appear to have been weakened rather than strengthened They lost more than thirty of their majority in the House of Representatives, and they lost the important States of Indiana and Virginia The decline of party discipline and unity is likewise marked The Senatorial election wrangles in several States and the divisions within the party line in Congress are proof of this Indifference to party obligations in the President has bred indifference among the voters and the local leaders The party has not, at the present time, either the united enthusiasm for a leader or the harmonious devotion to a policy of government necessary to insure a great and determined national canvass

Boston's Verdict.

An attendant at the Boston Public Library says that in Boston the most popular novelist, judging from the calls that are made for her works, is Miss Murfree, better known as "Charles Egbert Craddock." Mr Howells and Miss Jewett follow Miss Murfree. Mr. James is way down on the list, his "Daisy Miller" and "International Episode" being in some demand, while there is absolutely none at all for his latest volume, "The Bostonians." Among the English novelists Mr. Black leads, followed by Wilkie Collins and Mr Blackmore. Mr Black has gained wonderfully during the past few years, while Mr. Collins has seemed to lose in popularity. Sir Walter Scott heads the list of dead novelists, and seems to have a strong hold on popular favor, while there is always a steady demand for the works of Thackeray, Dickens, George Eliot and other standard authors. Colonel Ingersoll's lectures are seldom called for, and there is very little demand for Paine's "Age of Reason."

"Life assurance may be regarded in the light of a contract by which the inequalities of life are to a certain extent averaged and compensated so that those who die soon—or, rather, their families—become sharers in the good fortune of those who live beyond the average term of life And even should the assured himself live beyond the period at which his savings would have accumulated to more than the sum insured, he will not be disposed to repine, if he takes into account his exemption from corroding solicitude during so many years of his life "—Samuel Smiles in his work on "Thrift."

BIG DAY FOR THE REPUBLICANS.

Rousing Victory all Along the Line.

Lewiston Affords the Democrats a Grain of Comfort,

But the Gains Elsewhere Swallow it Up.

Let Bangor Prepare to Swell the Chorus.

Portland Solidly Republican.

PORTLAND, March 7. The election to-day resulted in an overwhelming victory for the Republicans. The vote was, Chapman, Republican, 3,793; McCarthy, Democrat, 2,550; Deering, Independent, 155; Hamblin, Prohibition, 95; Jewett, Labor, 5, giving Chapman 1,243 plurality and 95 over all. The Republicans elect municipal officers in five out of seven wards. The Board of Aldermen stand five to two in favor of the Republicans, the same as last year. There is no change in the common council which stands fifteen Republicans to six Democrats. The vote on taking Market Square for a soldiers' monument was 1,15? Yes, to 1,915 No.

The Republicans make a Clean Sweep in Rockland.

ROCKLAND, March 6. At the municipal election to-day Benjamin Williams, the present Republican mayor, was reelected over Bradford K. Kalloch, the Democratic nominee, by a majority of 322 out of a total vote of 1607. Williams' majority last year was 61. The Republicans elect 26 of the 28 members of the city council. The Democrats have one Alderman and one Councilman, both being elected on the union ticket. Last year the Democrats had 18 of the 28 members of the city council.

Farmington's Town Meeting.

FARMINGTON, March 7. At the town election to-day these officers were chosen: Moderator, Charles W. Keyes; Clerk, J. Warren Merrill; Selectmen, etc., S. G. Craig T. C. Perkins, Hiram Titcomb; Treasurer, F. H. Tufts; Superintending School Committee, for three years, E. B. Norton. The town voted to abolish the liquor agency and also appointed a committee to prepare plans and estimates for a new town building and report at a special meeting the first Monday in April.

Young Men's Candidate Elected in Gardiner

GARDINER, March 7. Major J. W. Berry, young men's candidate for Mayor, is elected by nearly 600 majority.

SKOWHEGAN, March 7. At the annual election to-day J. P. Blunt, J. W. Packard and Horace Eaton were elected Selectmen, two Republicans and one Democrat. There were no political caucus nominations. It was voted to abolish the school district system and adopt free text books in all schools but the High School.

Large Republican Gain in Ellsworth—The City Council Republican.

ELLSWORTH, March 7. H. B. Mason, Democrat, is re-elected Mayor by about eighty-five majority. The Republicans have carried three of the five wards, a large Republican gain.

Bridgton Handsomely Republican.

BRIDGTON, March 7. At the municipal election to-day the Republicans elected their entire ticket by upwards of one hundred majority.

Town Meeting in Eden—Large Increase in Valuation.

BAR HARBOR, March 7. The annual town meeting was held to-day. The warrant contained sixty-three articles. The selectmen's report shows that the valuation of 1886 showed an increase over 1885 of $353,511. The valuation of property of non-resident owners is $871,409, and that of resident owners $806,321. The town debt is $11,5?7. Several gentlemen from New York and Boston are here.

The Republicans of Bath Re-elect J. W. Wakefield for Mayor.

BATH, March 7. James W. Wakefield, Republican, was re-elected Mayor to-day by 110 majority over Charles E. Patten, Democrat and S. P. Snipe, Temperance. The Republicans elect the Aldermen in five wards and Councilmen in six wards. No choice for Aldermen in two wards and Councilman in one ward.

Saco Makes a Big Republican Gain.

SACO, March 7. The Republicans carried the city election to-day by 260 majority, a gain of 239 over last year. Judge Wm. T. Emmons was elected Mayor over Senator Harry A. Weymouth, Democratic nominee. Six out of the seven wards elected Republican officers.

Old Orchard Solidly Republican.

BIDDEFORD, March 7. The town election at Old Orchard to-day resulted in the choice of the Republican candidates for every officer. The largest vote polled was for first selectman, Irving J. Brown being elected over Millard F. Parker by three majority.

A Grain of Comfort for the Democrats.

FROM ROCKLAND.

Hotel Burned at Swan's Island.

ROCKLAND, March 7. The hotel at Swan's Island, H. A. Joyce proprietor, was totally destroyed by fire Friday night; insurance $3000 on buildings and $500 on contents. The hotel was built in 1883 at a cost of $5,000.

FROM THE STATE CAPITOL.

Doings of the Legislature.

AUGUSTA, March 7. The committee appointed by the Legislature to investigate the question as to whether the European & North American Railroad had complied with the conditions of the act by which certain State lands were granted it, the proceeds of which were to be applied to the construction of its road, will report substantially as follows:

It is the popular idea that the lands were granted on condition that the company should build a trunk line to the eastern boundary and to the northeastern boundary of Aroostook county, but the grant was divided into two parts—the ten townships grant and the general public land grant. The conditions were that the proceeds of the township grant should be used pro rata for the construction of the main line and the surplus, if any, for a branch into Aroostook county. This part of the act was subsequently repealed.

The general grant was upon the condition that the proceeds should be expended for the main line, with branches in Aroostook and Piscataquis counties. The company mortgaged these lands for the main line, the mortgage was broken and legally foreclosed and the title of these lands became absolute in the first mortgage bondholders. No surplus was left for the construction of branch lines. The State failed to designate any of these lands as open to immigration and settlement, therefore the road has not failed in this respect to fulfill its agreement and its title to the lands is not thereby affected. The report is entirely favorable to the road.

The Senate met at 10 A. M. It amended the fortnightly payment bill so that its provisions should affect only corporations, as it was originally reported. It amended the bill relating to the age of consent, reducing the age from 14 to 12.

PENSIONS GRANTED.

MR. BEECHER'S CONDITION.

The End Near at Hand.

BROOKLYN, March 7. The following bulletin was issued at noon:

The condition of Mr. Beecher at this hour does not vary essentially from that given to the press last evening. The only changes perceptible are an increase in the rapidity of the pulse and respirations. These stood, respectively, 108 and 36 to 38 per minute. The respiration is also more shallow. The temperature reaches 101 degrees. These symptoms indicate a gradual failure of vitality, and a consequent slow approach of the end. This course of the disease can only be changed by the occurrences of hemorrhage and accident, which may or may not happen, and the time of which can not be surmised. There are no reasons for believing that a fatal issue will occur to-day.

(Signed) W. S. SEARLE, M. D.

3 P. M. Mr. Beecher's pulse is a little more rapid but otherwise there is no perceptible change.

(Signed) W. S. SEARLE, M. D.

The End Thought to be Near.

Augustus Stans called before supper and was in the sick room a short time. On leaving the house he said that he thought Mr. Beecher would not live through the night.

At 5.40 Dr. Searle left the house to go home to his supper. He said that Mr. Beecher's pulse had increased considerably and he is gradually growing weaker. I think he is entirely unconscious, although some members of the family seem to think he recognizes them when they press his hands. He may live through the night and then he may die before morning.

Dr. Searle returned to the house at 6.50.

Waiting for the End.

Major Pond announced at 11.40 P. M. that the family were gathered about the sick man's bedside. His condition was more critical than it had been before during any part of the day. Lights appeared in different parts of the house and the family settled down for another night of watching and anxiety.

AROOSTOOK AT THE HUB.

A Large and Enthusiastic Meeting.

In connection with the meeting at Boston, Saturday, when Aroostook and her resources were discussed, a report of which appeared in the telegraphic columns of the WHIG Monday, a correspondent sends us some additional particulars. About four hundred seats were filled and many stood throughout the meeting.

Among those present from Maine were: Gov. Bodwell, Councillors Carter and Warren, Representative Clark, of Caribou; Hon. J. C. Talbot, Machias; Hon. William Dickey, Fort Kent; Hon. Wm. H. Strickland, Bangor; Hon. Fred Atwood, Winterport; Col. J. M. Adams, Portland; Hon. Lewis B. Johnson, Presque Isle; Geo. H. Gilman, Esq., Houlton Pioneer; Geo. H. Collins, North Star; Hon. Z. A. Gilbert, Hon. F. W. Hill, Hon. S. L. Boardman.

Col. Needham opened the meeting with a few very complimentary remarks on Aroostook and called Mr. Atwood to the chair. Mr. Gilbert presented some most valuable statistics. Gov. Bodwell's speech was right to the point and his name was cheered whenever mentioned. Mr. Dickey spoke of the success of those coming from other States to Maine, among them Gov. Bodwell, a native of Massachusetts; of another who came from Pennsylvania, first known as a journalist, then Speaker of the Maine House, then a member of Congress, United States Senator, Secretary of State, and possibly President of the United States. While he differed with both gentlemen politically, yet he was proud of them as citizens of Maine. They had honored every position occupied by them and would any position the Nation might call them to.

Hon. Harrison Hume made a vigorous speech, showing plainly that Aroostook had equal, if not superior, agricultural advantages to any section of the country.

Prof. Fernald, of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, made an interesting geological speech.

Ex-Mayor Pratt, of Worcester, fully endorsed all that had been said of Aroostook as a desirable locality, both agriculturally and socially.

Rev. Mr. Sleeper, of Worcester, formerly of Aroostook, gave a history of the Aroostook road of which he was a mover.

Letters were received from Senators Frye and Hale, Representatives Reed, Boutelle and Milliken.

The meeting was very enthusiastic throughout and cannot fail to do much good to Aroostook.

BANGOR UNANIMOUS.

Splendid Meeting at City Hall.

Earnest Speeches and Strong Resolutions.

A Committee of Fifty to Go to Augusta.

City Hall was packed last night by the representative business men of Bangor, to give expression to the unanimous sentiment of the city in relation to the application by the International Railway Company, now pending before the Legislature, for an amendment of its charter, allowing it to build its line from Greenville to a point on the Katahdin Iron Works Railway, parallel with the Piscataquis Railroad and within an average distance of ten miles thereof.

Could the members of the Maine Legislature have looked in upon that large and enthusiastic meeting they would have been quickly disabused of any ideas with which they may have been instilled by interested parties in regard to a division of sentiment upon this question so vital to the interests of Bangor and of the Piscataquis Railroad. It is no exaggeration but only the simplest and most apparent truth to say that at no time in the history of this city was there ever a question of such magnitude upon which there was such perfect unanimity as upon this.

We were glad to see among the audience our faithful representatives at Augusta, Senator Lord and Representative Barker, who came over to see for themselves and to bear personal witness in the halls of legislation to the grand, united, spontaneous and earnest feeling that pervades our community upon this question, and the loud, prolonged and heartfelt applause that endorsed the sentiments of the speakers must have revived them anew in the struggle in which they are engaged, and given them new courage to carry on the good work in which they have thus far so faithfully and so earnestly labored.

At half-past seven o'clock, the hour at which the meeting was called, Dr. A. C. Hamlin called the meeting to order and nominated Mayor Nealley as chairman.

Mr. Nealley came forward and said that as all were aware of the purpose for which the meeting had been held, to refute the impression that had been given out that Bangor was not a unit in its opposition, but that the people were divided, it was not necessary for him to make any extended remarks, as there were other gentlemen here who would address the meeting.

He then said it would be in order to complete the organization by the choice of one or two Secretaries, and, on motion of Alderman Davenport J. Swett Rowe and C. S. Lunt were chosen.

Hon. A. G. Wakefield moved that a committee of five be appointed to present resolutions expressive of the sense of the meeting, at the same time saying that he did not wish to serve as a member of the committee.

The chairman appointed the following gentlemen Hon. S. F. Humphrey, Hon. J. S. Wheelwright, George Stetson Esq., N. C. Ayer Esq., and Hon. George W. Ladd, and the committee retired.

The chairman then called upon Hon. A. G. Wakefield, President of the Piscataquis Railroad, to address the meeting.

Mr. Wakefield regretted that he had not a map present by which he could point out to the meeting the proposed route of the International road, and its relations to the route of the Piscataquis. He then very clearly, which from his long connection with the road he was able to do, described the situation as it exists and the disadvantages under which Bangor and the Piscataquis Railroad would labor should the proposed amendment to the Megantic charter be granted. Referring to the objection raised to using the Piscataquis road as a part of the International system on account of its heavy grades and sharp curves, Mr. Wakefield showed how easily the road might be made to conform to the requirements of the International.

He then showed by figures from other and leading railroads of the country how much they exceeded the Piscataquis in these particulars. While the objectionable curve at Bunker's Brook was but of ten degrees, the curve on the Maine Central at Augusta where the road strikes the westerly end of the bridge, is fifteen degrees, while the grades on the road are as high as from seventy to one hundred feet. The Ogdensburg Road has a continuous grade for nine miles of 115 feet to a mile. The Boston and Albany has a grade of nearly 100 feet near Springfield, while the Baltimore & Ohio, one of the finest roads in the country, has a grade in one place of over 150 feet. One road in Wyoming Territory has a grade of 70 feet per mile for 33 consecutive miles, a total of 2,300 feet.

It also has one trestle 650 feet long and and 126 feet above the masonry. Some of the larger roads have grades and curves greater than the Piscataquis, for instance the Pennsylvania and the Northern Pacific, both of which do the heaviest kind of work known to any roads in the country. Even with its present grade, one of the engines on the Piscataquis Railroad, and not one of the heaviest class of engines, easily takes thirteen loaded cars over it. The greatest grade of the road for a short distance is 92 feet and the greatest curve 10 degrees, both of which can be lessened at a moderate cost. Why should the International Railway be limited to a grade of 58 feet and a curve of six degrees? Can any reason be shown for it?

Mr. Wakefield said that he had lived here for many years, but he did not know of any question which had ever come up on which there was so much unanimity of opinion as upon this. People and press alike speak with one voice on the subject. He alluded to the fact that when in 1880, when our road was built as far as Blanchard, the Megantic folks proposed to buy our road. It was good enough for them to run over then. He then received the application for changes in their route made and granted in 1881 and 1885, and urged upon our people that they should insist upon their respecting the compacts then entered into.

Hon. Moses Giddings was next called upon. He said he had two questions which he wished to discuss; first, Are the interests of Bangor any way jeopardized? Second, Has Bangor any claim for protection?

The Piscataquis Railroad was built mainly by the city of Bangor and Bangor is therefore clearly entitled to protection. The road was designed to accomplish four things; first to aid in developing the resources of Piscataquis County, second to aid in developing the Moosehead Lake region third to form part of a connecting line between New Brunswick and Canada and fourth to enlarge and extend the business of Bangor.

He then proceeded to show what had been done in these directions and the increased value that has been given to Piscataquis County through the building of the road, an increase which it would never have received but for the road. The business of Bangor has been increased by the road. Bangor put $200,000 into the stock of the road and issued her bonds for $925,000 in aid of building the road. Bangor has also paid $281,000 in interest before the road was able to provide for its interest. Has Bangor not a right to have a voice in this question? In addition to this Bangor has also incurred a liability of $300,000 to extend the road to the Lake, making Bangor interested in the road to the amount of one-seventh of its entire valuation, real and personal.

Having paid $281,000 showed that the road had not been able to support itself. If one road cannot pay could two do so? That is the question to ask the Legislature. Mr. Giddings explained how and why some of the curves were made in the road, the benefit derived from it and how they could be done away with. It is a good piece of property and you should give the Legislature to understand that you demand protection to your property. (Loud applause.)

Hon. Lewis Barker was next called upon. He said the government of Great Britain is a suppliant before the Legislature of Maine asking for legislation to enable them to build a road across the State to transport men and munitions of war from their Atlantic to their Pacific possessions.

Not only do they ask to do this, but they ask to do it in such a way as to destroy the value of our own railroad. Bangor should show her earnestness in this matter, and show that there is no divided sentiment by going to Augusta unitedly and demanding that her interests should be protected. There is no divided opinion here unless it be some purchased opinion. We have invested our money in our road in the faith that the State would see our interests protected. We do not want the mortgage made perpetual. We should demand that the Legislature be true to us. He was one of the original charter members of the Megantic Company in 1870, and the company was chartered in the interest of Bangor and with the idea that the Piscataquis should be a connecting road and a part of the system.

The charter ran out and other parties got it renewed and since then have been asking and obtaining legislation in opposition to the idea with which the road was first intended to be built.

It is now a charter to the British government and the stock in the road is government stock. He believed that the Legislature will listen to the demand of Bangor and protect her interests.

Dr. Hamlin was called and said he would call for the report of the committee on resolutions instead of making any remarks of his own.

Judge Humphrey then reported, from the committee, the following

RESOLUTIONS:

Whereas, The City of Bangor has loaned its money and its credit to the amount of more than three millions of dollars for the purpose of developing the resources of this section of the State,

Resolved, that it is the imperative duty of the citizens of Maine to assist and stand by the City of Bangor in her struggle for the maintainance and protection of her rights against unjust encroachments of foreign corporations and railroad monopolies.

Resolved, That on behalf of the city of Bangor and the Bangor and Piscataquis Railroad Company, we, citizens of Bangor, respectfully, but earnestly, protest against amending the charter of the Megantic Railroad Company, so as to permit said company to construct a railroad between Greenville and the Bangor and Katahdin Iron Works Railroad on a line, the average distance of which is less than ten miles from the Piscataquis Railroad, and no point in the same exceeds twelve miles from said Piscataquis road; that granting said charter as prayed for would be a palpable infringement of vested rights and a manifest violation of two compromises between said railroad companies, confirmed and ratified by an act of the Legislature in 1881, and again in 1885, each of which was supposed by said city and said Piscataquis Company to be a finality; that relying on the good faith and finality of the compromise of 1881, said Piscataquis Railroad Company in 1883 and 1884 extended its railroad from Blanchard to the Lake, a distance of fourteen miles, at a cost of nearly $300,000, which never would have been made, had not said last named Company supposed said compromise was a finality; that the amended charter of 1885 permitted said Megantic Company to locate its road on the line prayed for and that we cannot believe that the Legislature of the State of Maine will permit this Company to nullify two compromises, and invade the vested rights of the Piscataquis Company.

Resolved, That our State Legislature cannot afford to humiliate itself—if it has no regard for us—by giving chartered rights to a foreign corporation which does so manifestly conflict with the vested rights of our citizens.

That the vital principles of trade and national comity should be based upon justice and right.

That our inter-colonial commerce by rail should be as well guarded by protection and careful legislation as our coastwise commerce is by the federal government.

In soliciting for this careful legislation, Bangor asks for no subsidy from the State, but she demands her rights.

Resolved, That there has never been greater unanimity among the citizens of Bangor on any great question touching the interest and welfare of Bangor than is expressed in opposition to the said amendment of said charter; that there is no divided sentiment; that the public voice is substantially all one way, excepting a few individuals who are personally interested, and that whoever represents that it is not so misrepresents the public sentiment of Bangor for selfish purposes.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted by a rising vote, and the adoption was followed by loud applause.

Hon. Levi B. Patten remarked that those opposed had not been called upon to vote, and wishing to know if there was even one in the hall opposed to the passage of the resolutions he would ask that the chair call for the contrary minded, which was done, but no one appeared in opposition.

B. B. Thatcher, Esq., was next called upon as one who had been at Augusta representing the interests of the city in the matter. He told of being met with the statement that this was not a question on which the citizens of Bangor were in harmony—that they were divided upon the subject.

He showed how our people were confronted with some of the ablest legal talent of the State, who are watching every move in the interest of the Maine Central Railroad Company, which wants to get possession of our road now that it is beginning to be of value. He wanted to see the Megantic road built, but when built he wanted to see it run over the Piscataquis road as far as they can. The road can be easily put in condition to meet the requirements. He hoped a large delegation would go to Augusta from Bangor to back up our Representatives.

Mr. F. O. Beal being called upon, said he would not undertake to speak, but would say that he was in hearty sympathy with the remarks of those who had spoken.

E. J. Morse was called upon who in turn called upon Senator Lord, who he saw in the audience.

Senator Lord said that he would like to hear from Dr. Ladd, and would speak afterwards if they wished to hear from him.

Hon. George W. Ladd then spoke. He said he would ask the western part of the State, would you sacrifice Bangor? He then showed how their own roads could be put in the same situation as the Piscataquis would be, should the demand of the Megantic people be granted, by building a parallel line from the western line of the State to Danville Junction and from Danville Junction to Wiscasset. He asked what Canada would say to us if we went to their parliament and proposed to build a road parallel to their roads through the Provinces? She would tell us to go home and go to an infant school.

Mr. Ladd spoke at considerable length and with much earnestness and force in favor of demanding of the Legislature to do justice to us in this matter.

Senator Lord was then called up and was greeted with applause. He said he would not attempt to make a speech there, but should attempt, in another place, to do what lay in his power to protect Bangor's interests. If you expect to win Bangor's fight you must not stop with speeches in City Hall. You must send your best men over to Augusta to camp on the ground till the fight is over. The combination at work against Bangor's interest is a powerful one. Senators and Representatives have not the time to talk with individual members on this question, and they want the intelligent, interested men of Bangor to come over there in force and reinforce them.

Mr. Lord spoke with much earnestness and eloquence and at his close was loudly applauded.

Representative Lewis A. Barker was next called up. He said he was there to listen, not to talk. When he saw in the morning paper the announcement of this meeting he decided to come over and see for himself the earnestness and unanimity of our people. He wanted to emphasize what Senator Lord had said about going into this matter in earnest and supporting it with all your strength. The work against Bangor was going on at Augusta long before any bill was introduced and men prejudiced in favor of the Megantic scheme in advance by the strongest lobby that ever assembled at the State Capitol. He referred to citizens of Bangor who have been at work all this session against the interests of Bangor and said there must be a spontaneous movement of the citizens of Bangor.

Come in force, said he, and make up your minds to see some particular man and do something to help us who must take the responsibility of the fight. (Applause.)

Mr. Bass being called upon spoke with much earnestness on the matters at issue and urged that a large delegation be sent to Augusta to show that the men who have been undertaking to represent that Bangor is divided in its sentiment does not represent her, but that she is entirely unanimous. He also gave some statistics relating to the business and distances of railroads, showing how Bangor will be brought as near to Minneapolis as Boston and New York.

He closed by making a motion that a committee of fifty or more, as the Mayor shall see fit, be appointed by the chair to go to Augusta to represent the city's interests in this fight. The motion was carried and the committee whose names appear below were appointed, and the meeting adjourned.

The meeting, as we said at the beginning, was a complete success from first to last, the audience was large and enthusiastic, the speakers eloquent and earnest, and the frequent outbursts of applause told how much their audience were in sympathy with them.

The following gentlemen have been named by the Mayor to go to Augusta on Wednesday, and if any whose names are here cannot go it is hoped that they will see that some one goes in their stead:

THE GUILD COURSE.

"Two Hundred Dollars Worth."

The vestry of the Essex street Baptist church was well filled last night to listen to the fifth lecture and entertainment given in the Guild course. Owing to the sickness of Mr. R. G. Hillman, who had been engaged to give some tenor solos, the musical programme was somewhat changed. Miss Bertha Milliken whistled several solos in a manner truly wonderful for a child of her age, while Rev. Mr. Sheldon sang some college songs which were interesting, especially "The Hungry Man."

At the appointed hour Rev. A. W. Anthony introduced the lecturer, who spoke for about an hour and a half, giving the substance of what he saw in London during a seven weeks' trip with the two hundred dollars which he quite unexpectedly had over and above his expenses at the Andover Seminary. With this small sum mentioned, and intent upon keeping within bounds, he embarked on a Cunarder as an intermediate passenger. Here was given a place remarkable for studying the different classes, for the intermediate passengers were cosmopolitan in their character. The speaker stated that during his college course he once won a prize of $50 on a theme the subject of which was "The Intermediate State," and he thought that when he had reached Erin he could have written one worth $200.

Mention was made of the methods of conveyance in England, and of the population of London and their yearly consumption of food and drink. Some of the principal streets of London are covered with asphalt, arranged in squares, many of which were decorated by artists, who thus earned their daily living.

A description of St. Paul's Cathedral was given when at ten o'clock every day services of great interest are held, especially fine is the singing of anthems by a choir of 30 boys. Mention was also made of Spurgeon's Tabernacle, where for thirty-three years Spurgeon himself, with no special training, had preached with wonderful effect.

Among the places visited by the speaker was Westminster Abbey, a regular museum of itself, where one can read epitaphs of all descriptions but none more singular than that written by Gay, an English poet:

Life is a jest, and all these show it,
Once I thought so, now I know it.

The following expenses make up the $200 spent: Passage across $35.; return $60.; other travelling expenses $25.; board $45.; amusements $17.; tips $5.; souvenirs $15. The lecture closed with Carlton's feeling poem, "The Travelled Parson." The speaker held the close attention of his audience and was most interesting throughout his lecture.

A Creaking Hinge
Is dry and turns hard, until oil is applied, after which it moves easily. When the joints, or hinges, of the body are stiffened and inflamed by Rheumatism, they cannot be moved without causing the most excruciating pains. Ayer's Sarsaparilla, by its action on the blood, relieves this condition and restores the joints to good working order.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla has effected, in our city, many most remarkable cures, in cases which baffled the efforts of the most experienced physicians. Were it necessary, I could give the names of many individuals who have been cured by taking this medicine. In my case it has worked wonders, relieving me of after being troubled with it for years. In this, and all other diseases arising from impure blood, there is no remedy with which I am acquainted, that affords such relief as Ayer's Sarsaparilla.—R. H. Lawrence, M. D., Baltimore, Md.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla cured me of Gout and Rheumatism, when nothing else would. It has eradicated every trace of disease from my system.—R. H. Short, Manager Hotel Belmont, Lowell, Mass.

I was, during many months, a sufferer from chronic Rheumatism. The disease afflicted me grievously, in spite of all the remedies I could find, until I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I took several bottles of this preparation, and was speedily restored to health.—J. Frame, Independence, Va.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

Quaker Testimony.
Mrs. A. M. Dauphin, of 1939 Ridge Ave., Philadelphia, has done a great deal to make known to ladies there the great value of Mrs. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as a cure for their troubles and diseases. She writes as follows: "A young lady of this city while bathing some years ago was thrown violently against the life line and the injuries received resulted in an ovarian tumor which grew and enlarged until death seemed certain. Her physician finally advised her to try Mrs. Pinkham's Compound. She did so and in a short time the tumor was dissolved and she is now in perfect health. I also know of many cases where the medicine has been of great value. Philadelphia ladies appreciate the worth of this medicine and its great value.

A Constant Study of a Noted Woman's Life.
Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, for years, made the diseases and weaknesses of her sex a constant study, and as a result of it was the famous "Vegetable Compound." Her knowledge equalled that of any first-class physician and therefore the remedy can be taken with perfect confidence. The subjects of treatment are so delicate that it is hard to be understood without trespassing on the grounds of what may seem improper language; yet it is a well-known fact that not one woman in ten is free from pain and troubles, therefore there is no good reason why they should not have the means placed before them of saving themselves. The medicine is exclusively for good purposes.

CHAPTER XII.

HOW SHE BEGAN TO FIND IT OUT.

"Is it a long voyage to Norway?" asked Trip at last, timidly.

They were far from Ringwood, and Ringmoor mill, and the little church and cluster of houses and elms of the village.

"We shall stay a bit in Lun'on," he answered.

There was a change in her husband's voice, in his intonation, that surprised her. "In your London house?"

"Ah!" he laughed. "Well—yes, in my Lun'on house. Now, my dear Trip, don't you get the indigestion if the dinner is not as high seasoned as pleases your mother."

"What do you mean, Algernon?" It was with an effort that she called him by his Christian name.

"You will find that out all too soon," he replied, somewhat uneasily. "I am sorry, dear girl, that things will not be quite as you might wish. In fact, Beaufort house, Piccadilly, is in the hands of the house painters, and the smell of the white lead is deleterious, so I thought it as well to take lodgings."

"But—we go to Norway to-morrow?" she said, looking round at him, and this was the first time she ventured to do this since she had stepped into the carriage with him. His face was troubled, he took her hand and kissed it, then looked out of the window.

"Norway must wait," he said with averted countenance.

Then he turned, and with a laugh said, "Perhaps Jericho will suit you better."

She could not make it out.

"I've been considering that perhaps you are a bad sailor, and would be upset at sea, and the barometer has been falling, and I see by the paper that the storm signals are up, and so we had better postpone our departure."

"Till the storm is over?"

"Oh, yes! till the storm is over."

What was the meaning of the alteration in his manner and tone of voice, even in the appearance his face wore! They were in the train. He made her get out at a station where there were branches and cross lines in all directions. They changed platforms, took fresh tickets, got out again; had a cab. Took the Metropolitan; then another cab, and at last drew up.

"Your lodgings seem very difficult to reach," said Trip.

"They are sequestered," he answered; "more suitable for lovers."

The house at which the cab deposited Trip and her husband was a small half villa at Lower Norwood, in a new road half made, and where the row of houses was only half built. The garden was uncultivated, a small patch in front of the door; the turf was not even green. The entrance door was fresh painted and stuck. When it was opened, admission was obtained into a small hall, so narrow that two could ill walk abreast in it. The mean stairs were steep and uncarpeted. There was accommodation only on one side—the right side of the house; a blank wall divided this half house from the other half house. There was a parlor on the ground floor, and a small dining room in the rear, opening into a yard. The furniture was of the plainest description and sparse. Only one servant appeared, an ill favored, elderly, smallpox marked woman.

Trip was puzzled and frightened, and very ready to cry. She was afraid to ask questions, and afraid to express her disappointment.

For supper there were mutton chops and boiled potatoes, and cold rice pudding; no wine, but ale and whisky and water.

Certainly the style of living was better at Ringwood, though the Tottenhams did belong to trade, and had no pretense to a duke in the family.

That Mr. Beaufort was very fond of Trip was the only reality of her dream, and it was the reality she could best have spared. She did not care for him; indeed, as her marriage drew on, she had felt a shrinking from him, and now that she was married awoke to the fact that she disliked him.

There are some persons with whom you may pass a score of years, and whom you may meet every day, and yet you get no nearer to knowing them. You know their exteriors, every line of their faces, every mole and blemish in the skin; you know their tones of voice, their walk, but you never get within, to know their true natures, to feel that you have touched a pulse, not a bit of cloth or sable jacket.

There are other individuals whom we fear to look into. We know that some day or other the peep will be given, and we shall see what we had much rather not. We are glad to know their exterior only, and dread the day when they shall become transparent to us.

Some such a feeling was in the heart of Trip. She began to fear her husband, to suspect that under the surface she should come on, not a hidden treasure, but dead men's bones and rottenness.

Day after day passed and Trip was very dull. She asked if the Norway excursion were finally abandoned. He said it was so; but gave no reason. Had the storm that was expected missed its course? He did not know.

Were they going into Gloucestershire? He laughed at the question. The foundations of the house were not laid. The estate was in Cloudland.

Occasionally he took her out. Once to the Tower, once to the Crystal Palace; but he did not like visiting public resorts apparently, for he seemed uneasy when there, took no pleasure in the sights, and was impatient to get away.

Trip asked her husband if she might write home; as she was not going abroad, she would like to send a line to her mother. He peremptorily refused to allow her to write. "Not for a month, mind you: your mother expects no letter, and will not be uneasy about you. Let her believe you are in Norway. What matters?"

"But why this mystery, Algernon?"

"Why—mystery?" he rubbed his chin. "There is no mystery. You don't understand. I have objections. My friends and relatives may call, and I don't want 'em to come in and find your mother here. If you wrote, she'd be fumbling in with her airs and grimaces."

Trip was hurt.

"Why do you go out so much and leave me alone?"

"I have business, and business must be attended to."

"What is your business?"

"Nothing that you can understand."

"I insist on knowing," said Trip, with spirit. He looked at her with surprise.

"Well, then, I have political occupation, am secretary to a Liberal club; we have to work for elections, and see and arrange with agents, organize meetings, and so on. What do you know about politics? Are you much the wiser now?"

No; Trip had to admit that she was not.

Trip only half believed her husband when he said this. She was ashamed of herself for the mistrust which grew on her, and made her doubt everything he said, and everything he had said to her. Not one of his promises had be fulfilled. His boastful words had been utterly false. He would not suffer her to leave the house by herself. He pretended that she would lose her way. But she argued, unless she went out and about, and did lose herself occasionally, how was she ever to find her way at all? His hours were irregular and strange. He was out mostly at night, but not always; sometimes he had friends to see him on business—political business, he said, and they spent the night with him and spirits and water and tobacco in the back parlor, the shutters of which were fastened.

After he had been out all night, he slept all day.

Trip was surprised at the amount of coal ash which was left in the grate in the morning, after the party of politicians had sat up all night. She asked her husband how they had come to consume so much, and put the stove in such a mess. He turned off her question with a jest, that as they were all Liberals they had dealt liberally with the scuttle.

One morning, when in his room that looked out on the back premises, Trip found in the drawers a plan. She looked at it carefully and curiously, and was surprised to find that it was a plan of Ringwood hall. She was convinced that it was so, all the rooms were arranged in the same order as those of the hall. She took it to her husband.

"This is Ringwood," she said.

He started. "Where did you find it? What have you been doing?"

"I found it in the back room. What is it for?"

"Oh, I took it when shown over the place. I said then it was for building purposes."

"But you are not building in Gloucestershire, you have no Gloucestershire property."

"Who told you that? How clever you are. I intend to build some day, so keep the plan by me."

"That is not the plan you drew. That was in your pocket book."

"Well—I made a clean copy on paper. Look here, Trip! I will not be spied on and cross-examined. I give you fair warning, I will not allow it. Mischief will come of it."

Trip soon perceived that she was watched by the woman who did all the house work, when her husband was away. This woman was clearly initiated into the secrets of her master, secrets which were kept from herself, the wife. This made Trip jealous and suspicious. She particularly disliked this maid, who had an unpleasant face, and was dirty. The woman did not take the pains to be civil to Trip. She viewed her with malevolence, and was sometimes disobedient, and occasionally rude. Trip remonstrated with her husband. She said that she could not endure the woman, and would not live in the house with her any longer.

"All right," answered Mr. Beaufort, "I'll give Nelly a month's warning. Put up with her for a few weeks, and I'll engage you another. Servants are hard to get, and we should be in a pretty plight if left without any."

"Oh, let her go!" entreated Trip. "Let her go at once, I will gladly do her work myself, for the pleasure of getting rid of her."

"What!" exclaimed her husband. "You work as a menial after having married me? Not to be thought of for Mrs. Beaufort."

Trip, who had been so free, was a prisoner, so lively, was now pensive; so fond of singing and skipping and talking, now sat still in her chair, with her hands in her lap, looking at the plain paper on the wall in front of her, doing nothing, and without the heart to sing, and with no one to whom to speak.

She put on her pretty crushed strawberry dress and black mittens and pink bonnet hat, and looked at herself in the glass; then threw away her bonnet on the bed, cast herself into the chair again and the tears ran silently down her cheeks.

Poor Trip! She was beginning to find out that she had been deceived in everything which she had expected.

Foreclosure Notice.
Whereas, John Andrews, of Exeter, by his mortgage deed dated January 28th, 1884, and recorded in the Penobscot Registry of Deeds, Vol. 546, page 256, conveyed to me several parcels of real estate in said County, which in said mortgage are described in the words and figures following, viz:
"The following parcels of land, as described in the following deeds.
First: From Ebenezer P. French & Sanborn J. French, of lot in Garland, deed to me dated Oct. 31, 1804, recorded in Penobscot Registry, Vol. 349, P. 301.
Second: from Loren A. Davis to me, land in Exeter, deed dated Dec. 6, 1819, recorded Vol. 201, P. 340.
Third: from John White, of Corinth lot, deed dated Oct. 29th, 1872, recorded Pen. Registry, Vol. 434, P. 430.
Fourth: from George R. Reed, of Corinth lot, deed dated Dec. 15, 1875, recorded Pen. Registry, Vol. 463, P. 44.
Fifth: from Thomas W. Folley, of Corinth lot, deed dated July 14, 1883, deed to be recorded herewith, said parcel in this deed being 15 acres out of Lot C, 1st Range,
And also the steam mill and some thirty or forty acres of land connected therewith, situate on the East side of the Avenue Road in Exeter, same I had of Geo. Ulmer, and is the only mill of the kind I own in Exeter."
And whereas the conditions of said mortgage have been, and yet remain broken, this is a notice that for that cause I claim a foreclosure of said mortgage.

INFECTED BLOOD,
SCROFULOUS, INHERITED AND CONTAGIOUS HUMORS CURED BY CUTICURA.
Through the medium of one of your books received through Mr. Frank T. Wray, Druggist, Apollo, Pa., I became acquainted with your Cuticura Remedies, and take this opportunity to testify to you that their use has permanently cured me of one of the worst cases of blood poisoning, in connection with erysipelas, that I have ever seen, and this after having been pronounced incurable by some of the best physicians in our county. I take great pleasure in forwarding to you this testimonial, unsolicited as it is by you, in order that others suffering from similar maladies may be encouraged to give your Cuticura Remedies a trial.
P. S. WHITLINGER, Leechburg, Pa.
Reference: FRANK T. WRAY, Druggist, Apollo, Pa.

SCROFULOUS ULCERS.
James E. Richardson, Custom House, New Orleans, on oath says: "In 1870 Scrofulous Ulcers broke out on my body until I was a mass of corruption. Everything known to the medical faculty was tried in vain. I became a mere wreck. At times could not lift my hands to my head, could not turn in bed; was in constant pain, and looked upon life as a curse. No relief or cure in ten years. In 1880 I heard of the Cuticura Remedies, used them, and was perfectly cured."
Sworn to before U. S. Com. J. D. CRAWFORD.

ONE OF THE WORST CASES.
We have been selling your Cuticura Remedies for years, and have the first complaint yet to receive from a purchaser. One of the worst cases of Scrofula I ever saw was cured by the use of five bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, Cuticura, and Cuticura Soap. The Soap takes the "cake" here as a medicinal soap.
TAYLOR & TAYLOR,
Druggists, Frankfort, Kan.

SCROFULOUS, INHERITED.
And Contagious Humors, with Loss of Hair, and Eruptions of the Skin, are positively cured by Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally, and Cuticura Resolvent internally, when all other medicines fail. Send for Pamphlet.

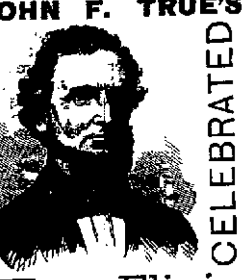

DRUGGISTS USE THEM.
We have obtained satisfactory results from the use of the Cuticura Remedies in our own family, and recommend them beyond any other remedies for diseases of the skin and blood. The demand for them grows as their merits become known.
MACMILLAN & CO., Druggists, Latrobe, Pa.

CUTICURA REMEDIES
are sold everywhere. Price: Cuticura, the Great Skin Cure, 50 cts.; Cuticura Soap, an Exquisite Beautifier, 25 cts.; Cuticura Resolvent, the New Blood Purifier, $1.00. POTTER DRUG & CHEMICAL CO., Boston.

Choking Catarrh.
Have you awakened from a disturbed sleep with all the horrible sensations of an assassin clutching your throat and pressing the life-breath from your tightened chest? Have you noticed the languor and debility that succeed the effort to clear your throat and head of this catarrhal matter? What a depressing influence it exerts upon the mind, clouding the memory and filling the head with pains and strange noises! How difficult it is to rid the nasal passages, throat and lungs of this poisonous mucus all can testify who are afflicted with catarrh. How difficult to protect the system against its further progress towards the lungs, liver and kidneys, all physicians will admit. It is a terrible disease, and cries out for relief and cure.
The remarkable curative powers, when all other remedies utterly fail, of Sanford's Radical Cure, are attested by thousands who gratefully recommend it to fellow-sufferers. No statement is made regarding it that cannot be substantiated by the most respectable and reliable references.
Each packet contains one bottle of the Radical Cure, one box of Catarrhal Solvent, and an Improved Inhaler, with treatise and directions, and is sold by all druggists for $1.00.
